55-57. soruları aşağıdaki parçaya göre cevaplayınız.

There are parallels between the Internet explosion of the 1990s and the radio boom of the 1890s. Both were new technologies, little understood, about to emerge with unpredictable force. Guglielmo Marconi, the inventor of the radio, realised that if he could make radio work, he could make a fortune. He progressed fast. In July 1896, he sent signals a mile over central London, by September two miles across Salisbury Plain. By May 1897, Marconi was transmitting across the Bristol Channel, and in December that year, from the Isle of Wight to a ship in the Bristol Channel. Soon he registered a business, which became Marconi's Wireless Telegraph Company Ltd.

55- We learn from the passage that the early development of the radio

- A) was exactly like the present development of the Internet
- B) led directly to the development of the Internet
- C) was undertaken for purely scientific reasons
- D) was much slower than the development of the Internet
- E) is in some ways comparable to the rapid development of the Internet

- D) was a slow and methodical worker
- E) sent a transatlantic radio transmission as part of his initial experiment

57- It is obvious that the two inventions mentioned in the passage

- A) caused the inventors to lose a lot of money initially
- B) required a lot of people involved in their early developments
- C) left their actual inventors obscure
- D) took place at an interval of roughly a century
- E) were both realised purely by chance

58-60. soruları aşağıdaki parçaya göre cevaplayınız.

Genets are of wide distribution throughout Africa, and one species extends northwards into Europe. They are beautiful little animals and measure from the tip of their tail to the nose a little over a metre. Genets haunt the jungle and forest and feed on small rodents, birds, and eggs. They are not popular with African farmers, for they will raid their chicken coops. They climb well. When stalking their prey, they are snake-like with their long thin body and tail pressed close to the ground. They are sometimes tamed and are expert mouse and rat catchers.

58- The passage tells us that genets resemble a snake

- A) in terms of their natural habitats
- B) in their feeding habits
- C) as they chase their prey
- D) when they climb a tree
- E) with their long tail

59- The passage makes it clear that genets

- A) may do harm to farmers' poultry
- B) mostly live on wild fruits and nuts
- C) cannot survive in captivity
- D) inhabit most parts of the world
- E) will always remain wild

60- We understand from the passage that genets are found

- A) mostly in the zoos of some African countries
- B) wherever farmers keep chickens
- C) both in their natural state and in captivity
- D) in dry regions which are sparsely vegetated
- E) always in tree-tops in African jungles

61-63. soruları aşağıdaki parçaya göre cevaplayınız.

William Ewart Gladstone and Benjamin Disraeli dominated Victorian politics. Both were prime ministers. Gladstone accepted office almost as a duty, Disraeli seized it triumphantly. Despite Gladstone's skill as a reformer and financier, his ability to influence the masses with his speech and his passionate belief in the freedom of the individual, Queen Victoria preferred the showy, witty and ambiguous Disraeli. Gladstone strongly opposed Disraeli's imperialism and, though both introduced far reaching reforms, Disraeli was the greater opportunist, taking immediate advantage of any circumstance of possible benefit. Whereas Disraeli laid the foundations of the modern British Conservative party, Gladstone's Liberal party declined in the twentieth century.

61- The passage is mainly about

- A) why Queen Victoria preferred Disraeli
- B) a comparison of two famous Victorian politicians
- C) the reasons why Disraeli was more popular than Gladstone
- D) Gladstone's speaking ability
- E) a history of Victorian politics

62- We learn from the passage that today's Conservative party in England

- A) is a continuation of the party established by Disraeli
- B) is a little more liberal than Disraeli's Conservative party
- C) still retains all the rules set by Disraeli
- D) refuses to have any connection with Disraeli's party
- E) is strongly influenced by religion, as was Disraeli's party

63- From the author's statements, we can conclude that

- A) Gladstone was more virtuous than Disraeli
- B) Gladstone was a strong authoritarian
- C) Gladstone was always in conflict with Queen Victoria
- D) Disraeli was politically to the left of Gladstone
- E) Disraeli was the prime minister for a longer period than Gladstone

The Chinese scientists employed in space program have promised the ultimate great leap forward: a Chinese astronaut in orbit by 2005, and a manned landing on the moon by 2010. This will be followed by a permanent lunar base, besides other purposes, to exploit the new high frontier of commerce. "China is expected to complete its first exploration of the moon in 2010 and will establish a moon base, just as we did on the North and South Poles," promised Ouyang Ziyuan, head of China's moon exploration programme as he launched the country's national science and technology week in Beijing.

64- According to the passage, the Chinese space program

- A) is more interested in manned space flight than in anything else
- B) is progressing faster than any other in the world
- C) will soon be ahead of the American one
- D) plans to use the North and South Poles to launch moon rockets
- E) plans to put a man on the moon within less than a decade

65- It is understood from the passage that Chinese plans for future space exploration

- A) depend on foreign scientists
- B) are purely scientific
- C) are not progressing smoothly
- D) are partially commercial
- E) are for military purposes

66- We understand from the passage that, in addition to its planned space explorations, China

- A) also has the world's fastest growing commerce
- B) will have established a permanent lunar base by 2005
- C) already has bases on the North and South Poles
- D) has some of the world's most powerful rockets
- E) is becoming more and more successful in commerce

67-69. soruları aşağıdaki parçaya göre cevaplayınız.

DDT is an insecticide which began to be used on a wide scale in the 1950s. It was sprayed on crops to kill insect pests, and sprayed to kill mosquitoes which cause malaria. The results were excellent; the crops thrived and malaria was almost wiped out. After some time, however, naturalists began to notice that some birds of prey were less common. Tracing their food chain back, it was eventually discovered that the birds of prey were feeding on smaller birds which had eaten caterpillars and insects that had been sprayed. When they'd eaten a number of these contaminated birds, the DDT became so concentrated in their bodies that their eggs became infertile. Even worse, a tougher strain of DDT-resistant mosquitoes began making a come-back, with the result that today malaria is again a big problem.

67- The ultimate results of using DDT can be best described as

- A) not as big a failure as was once thought
- B) unsuccessful as well as harmful to the environment
- C) the best way to eliminate mosquitoes causing malaria
- D) successful in that DDT killed even more animals than it was intended to
- E) one of the great advances of 20th-century technology

68- With the use of DDT, initially,

- A) malaria came close to elimination
- B) there were almost no pests left
- C) only the smaller birds remained unaffected
- D) there were accidental spraying of crops
- E) some types of mosquitoes were not killed

69- The statement that can best sum up the passage is that

- A) we must be careful about what kind of birds we eat
- B) malaria is a disease that can never be eliminated from the Earth
- C) anyone travelling to countries where there is malaria should take preventive medicine
- D) pests have always been the biggest threat to crops
- E) introducing a new substance into the environment can have unexpected consequences

In the 1950s, the segregation laws of Montgomery, Alabama, were complex: blacks were required to pay their fare to the driver, then get off and reboard through the back door. Sometimes the bus would drive off before the paid-up passengers made it to the back entrance. If the white section was full and another white passenger entered, blacks were required to give up their seats and move farther to the back; a black person was not even allowed to sit across the aisle from whites. These humiliations were intensified by the fact that two-thirds of the bus riders in Montgomery were black.

70- According to the passage, bus drivers in Montgomery in the 1950s

- A) sometimes drove away leaving black passengers behind
- B) often charged black passengers more than whites
- C) had complex routes to follow
- D) were usually black
- E) did not approve of the local segregation laws

71- The author points out that black people in Montgomery had to

- A) stand up on a bus throughout the journey
- B) pay their fares twice in order to ride a bus
- C) board a bus whose driver was also black
- D) get on a bus twice for one ride
- E) get off the bus when a white passenger boarded

72- The author seems to imply that, in Montgomery,

- A) there were too few buses to give a decent service to all passengers
- B) the black population was not big enough to resist the whites
- C) the blacks were not allowed to exceed two-thirds of the passengers on a bus
- D) there was not enough space on buses for the blacks to ride comfortably
- E) about two-thirds of the bus drivers were black

73-75. soruları aşağıdaki parçaya göre cevaplayınız.

The Beatles were, and remain to this day, the world's most astounding rock'n'roll band. The never-ceasing astonishment is what everyone felt back in the winter of 1964, when "Beatlemania", a hysteria that had erupted in Britain the year before, suddenly jumped the Atlantic and took instant root in the US. First, in January, came the arrival of I Want to Hold Your Hand. Then one week later, She Loves You careened onto the charts. The week after that came the headlong rush of Please Please Me, and by April, the top five singles in the country were all Beatles records. By the end of the year, they had logged 29 hits on the U.S. charts. It is hard — no, it is impossible — to imagine any of the thousands of carefully marketed little bands of today repeating a quarter of that feat.

73- As we learn from the passage, it was in 1964 that the Beatles

- A) first became popular in Britain
- B) recorded their first hit record
- C) were astonished by their own success
- D) broke up after an astonishing string of hits
- E) gained a hysterical following in the United States

74- The author seems to believe that the "Beatlemania" in the US

- A) is better understood today
- B) still amazes people
- C) did not actually result from the success of the Beatles
- D) wouldn't happen if they lived today
- E) is what still makes them so popular

75- The author of the passage feels that today's rock bands

- A) are all following in the Beatles' footsteps
- B) cannot play more than three chords
- C) can never achieve as much as the Beatles did
- D) should play old Beatles songs
- E) have to try hard to repeat the Beatles' success

- 81- Why did Aldous Huxley's 1932 futuristic novel Brave New World succeed? For some it is an attack on eugenics, or selective breeding policies; for others it is a defence of high culture against the masses. For yet others it is a liberal condemnation of brain-washing and fascism; for others still a liberal condemnation of brain-washing and communism. American students in the 1950s even read it as a celebration of free love.
- A) It is often thought of along with Orwell's 1984, though they are completely different
 B) It is a simple and straightforward book that does not lend itself to varying interpretations
 C) Part of its secret must be that almost anyone who reads it can find their own views reflected
 D) In Huxley's pessimistic worldview, society had become hard and harsh
 E) On the other hand, it has never been filmed
- 82- One of the founders of French Canada, Jacques Cartier discovered the entrance to the St. Lawrence River in 1534, and returned to spend the winter there in 1535-6. Friendly Indians told him of a place up-river they called 'Canada', which became the name of the new land. Cartier himself named a hilltop 'Mont Real', meaning royal mountain. But rocks which he hoped contained gold and diamonds turned out to be worthless.
- A) As a result, he had to be content with trade rather than settling the country he had discovered
 B) Consequently, he became one of France's richest men overnight
 C) The French language is still widely spoken in parts of Canada
 D) There was another much later gold rush in the Yukon, but this was nowhere near the area Cartier explored
 E) Because of this, he is remembered as one of the wealthiest explorers of all time

- 83- In the future, not only will there be changes in technology and the way in which jobs are performed, there will also be changes in where the work is done. It will be increasingly possible for them to remain at home and work through computers and telephones. 85- The struggle to get women the right to vote, led by Emmeline Pankhurst and her daughter Christabel at the head of the militant suffragists, troubled Britain from 1905 to 1914. The opposition that the Liberal government demonstrated looks incomprehensible today, and it provoked, among all classes and conditions of women, furious and passionate protests. Women were battered in demonstrations and, on hunger strikes, brutally force-fed in prison.

- A) Looking back, it is remarkable just how easily women were able to gain the right
- B) The response of the police and the crowds of suffragist opponents still makes shocking reading
- C) During World War I, from 1914 to 1918, women did many of the jobs traditionally reserved for men
- D) In Turkey, on the other hand, women were given the right to vote without even having to ask for it
- E) In spite of this struggle, voter turnouts in both Britain and the US are at an all-time low

The original source of fire undoubtedly was lightning, and such blazes ignited by good fortune remained the only source of fire for eras. For some years, Peking man, about 500,000 BC, was believed to be the earliest unquestionable user of fire; evidence uncovered in Kenya in 1981 and in South Africa in 1988, however, suggests that the earliest controlled use of fire by people dates from about 1,420,000 years ago. Not until about 7000 BC did Neolithic man acquire reliable fire-making techniques, in the form either of drills, saws and other friction-producing tools or of flint struck against pyrites. Even then it was more convenient to keep a fire alive permanently than to reignite it.

55- According to the latest research, the first of man's ancestors to use fire as a tool were

- A) those who lived in Africa about 1.42 million years ago
- B) Peking men, who lived about 500,000 years ago
- C) clever enough to develop simple tools to reignite fire
- D) Neolithic men, who inhabited the Earth 7000 years ago
- E) aware that they found fire because they were lucky

56- The passage claims that man first obtained fire from

- A) hitting two flint stones together
- B) praying to the gods
- C) producing friction using saws
- D) blazes triggered by lightning
- E) the efforts to imitate lightning

57- The passage implies that, Neolithic man, though able to make fire from scratch,

- A) did not know how or where to use it
- B) preferred to keep their fires burning permanently
- C) worshipped fire as magic
- D) had to wait for a lightning strike to start a fire
- E) learned to make fires from Peking man

If the Botswana government has its way, the Basarwa bushmen's nomadic existence will soon be a thing of the past. Their practice of hunting animals with spears and traps over large tracts of arid land is already almost extinct, but the state is helping to speed up the process by moving desert-dwellers off their ancestral lands into permanent settlements. Botswana, as the world's largest producer of diamonds, has the highest per capita income in Africa, but it is very unevenly distributed. The government says its aim in settling the bushmen is to help them benefit from this wealth by providing schools, health care and job training. But it appears that there are more evil reasons.

58- It is pointed out in the passage that the government of Botswana

- A) wishes to produce more diamonds
- B) wants to wipe out nomads to the last individual
- C) is attempting to change the life-style of nomads
- D) is trying to be fair in its distribution of wealth
- E) always gets its own way

59- According to the passage, in Botswana,

- A) there is a wide gap between people's incomes
- B) the bushmen have been voluntarily abandoning their nomadic existence
- C) there are permanent settlements in deserts
- D) the abundance of diamonds has benefited most of the population
- E) hunting large animals is still the main source of meat

60- It is obvious that the author does not believe the government of Botswana

- A) is attempting to make Botswana the world's largest producer of diamonds
- B) is only concerned for the welfare of the bushmen
- C) would like to exploit the nomadic way of life for tourism
- D) can distribute the income from the diamonds more fairly
- E) holds any evil purposes concerning the future of the bushmen

A favourite example of the "education for growth" school of thought is South Korea. This is a country in which from the 1960s to the late 1980s the government made education a priority. Primary education became universal. Secondary education grew from 25% to 100% participation, university rates trebled and income growth averaged more than 7% per year. This all sounds very convincing, but what about Egypt? Between 1970 and 1998, Egypt's primary enrollment rates grew to more than 90%, secondary schooling levels rose from 32% to 75% and university education doubled. It started the period as the globe's 47th poorest country; it was the 48th poorest at the end.

61- We learn from the passage that the educational policy in South Korea

- A) has not been as successful as that of Egypt
- B) puts more stress on primary than secondary education
- C) has been successful because of certain cultural factors
- D) has not seen its success reflected in economic growth
- E) seems to have succeeded in making people wealthier

62- The passage informs us that compared to the educational policy of South Korea, that of Egypt

- A) has been even more spectacularly successful
- B) has not particularly affected the university enrollment rates
- C) has been more successful at secondary level than at primary level
- D) has not supported the economic growth
- E) has put Egypt further back in terms of technological development

63- One can conclude from the passage that the educational policy mentioned

- A) is directly related to the intelligence levels of the population
- B) takes into account the cultural structures of Asian countries
- C) may not produce the same desired results for all countries
- D) requires a similar economic policy to be effective
- E) does not actually affect the economic growth of a country

Mary Cassatt was born in Allegheny City in the USA in 1844 and died in Le Mesnil-Teribus, France, in 1926. She began her art studies at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts but continued in Paris and Rome. She had begun exhibiting her works at the National Academy of Design in Europe as well as in Paris by the 1870s. She settled permanently in Paris in 1874, where she was later joined by her family. Cassatt is the best-known woman artist of the group of Impressionists, which explains why she was mostly known for her appealing mother and child studies, although she was a multi-talented artist whose canon of works ranges widely over different styles. She was a close associate of painters such as Manet and Degas, whose influence may be seen in her works. Cassatt's etchings were influenced by Japanese wood block prints that were popular at the time.

64- According to the passage, although Mary Cassatt was born in the United States,....

- A) she spent most of her life in Paris
- B) she went to Japan to learn traditional Japanese art
- C) she didn't have any influence on the art of her own country
- D) she went to Europe to escape from her family
- E) she was never recognised there as an artist

65- The author believes that Mary Cassatt's chief claim to fame is that she

- A) was a friend of Manet and Degas
- B) was a woman artist
- C) influenced Manet and Degas
- D) began exhibiting at such an early age
- E) was the first artist to explore the possibilities of Japanese wood block prints

66- We understand from the passage that as an artist, Mary Cassatt was

- A) not able to break out of the narrow confines represented by a small group of artists
- B) influenced by a wide variety of artistic styles
- C) limited to painting pictures of women and children
- D) better known in Europe than in the United States
- E) more famous in the United States than in Europe

Born near Dublin in 1882, James Joyce was the eldest of the 10 surviving children of the Joyces. His father was a witty, but hard drinking and extravagant person, while his mother, a devout Roman Catholic, helplessly watched her husband drive the family into near poverty. James's entire education came at the hands of the Jesuit priests. By the time he graduated from University College, Dublin, in 1902, he decided he had learned enough to reject his religion and all his obligations to family, homeland and the British who ruled there. Literature would be his vocation. Thus Joyce departed Dublin with nearly all the narratives he would ever write already stored in his memory. What remained for him to do was transform this into an art that could measure up to his own expectations.

67- We understand from the passage that it was James's father who

- A) gradually worsened the family's financial situation
- B) made life unbearable for him in Ireland
- C) gave him the inspiration to become a writer
- D) wanted him to be educated by Jesuit priests
- E) educated his large family almost single-handedly

68- When James Joyce finished university, he

- A) was already a well-known writer
- B) decided to be different from his father by accepting family responsibilities
- C) felt that he was not ready to be a writer, so he decided on a life of adventure
- D) decided to cut himself off from his past, except for the subjects of his writing
- E) was still influenced by his mother's Catholicism

69- It is pointed out in the passage that all of Joyce's work

- A) was written in his homeland, Ireland
- B) was completed when he was still a young man
- C) earned enough money for him to help his family
- D) helped the cause of Irish freedom from Britain
- E) was based on his early experiences in his homeland

Eighty years later, Charlie Chaplin is still here. In a 1995 worldwide survey of film critics, Chaplin was voted the greatest actor in movie history. He was the first, and to date the last, person to control every aspect of the filmmaking process — founding his own studio, United Artists, with Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford and D.W. Griffith, and producing, casting, directing, writing, scoring and editing the movies he starred in. In the first decades of the 20th century, when weekly movie going was an American national habit, Chaplin more or less invented global recognisability and helped turn an industry into an art. In 1916, only his third year in films, his salary of $10,000 a week made him the highest-paid actor, possibly the highest paid person, then in the world.

70- According to the passage, a unique aspect of Charlie Chaplin was that

- A) he was one of the earliest film makers
- B) people still like him after many years
- C) he governed all the processes a film undergoes
- D) Douglas Fairbanks was his business partner
- E) he was a great comedian

71- The author points out that in the early years of the 20th century,

- A) Charlie Chaplin was an American national habit
- B) most Americans went to the cinema once a week
- C) Charlie Chaplin had not yet begun to make his mark
- D) only Americans were able to recognise Charlie Chaplin
- E) Charlie Chaplin was voted the greatest actor in movie history

72- As we understand from the passage, in 1916, Charlie Chaplin

- A) turned film making into an art
- B) was shooting his third film
- C) was a man earning more than any actor in the world
- D) founded his own studio
- E) had been making films for a considerably long time

For environmentalists, and increasingly the energy industry as well, the resolution to the energy crisis is the so-called hydrogen economy. It's a sensible scenario in which hydrogen, which emits nothing more harmful than water when burned, fuels our cars and runs our power plants. Environmentally friendly as hydrogen is, its production remains problematic. Most supplies are extracted from natural gas, a process that also creates other dangerous chemicals, like nitrous oxides. Now, however, a group of researchers at England's University of Warwick are working on an efficient and clean method of producing nearly-pure hydrogen from biomass: the wet waste from sewage plants, paper mills and large farms. And, unlike hydrogen itself, supplies of biomass are always abundant.

73- We learn from the passage that the phrase "hydrogen economy" means

- A) the use of environmentally friendly hydrogen as a source of energy
- B) using natural gas to produce large quantities of hydrogen
- C) discovering a source of energy cleaner than hydrogen
- D) plentiful supplies of biomass
- E) finding a use for by-products of hydrogen production such as nitrous oxides

74- The passage tells us that, although hydrogen itself is a fuel that can be burned without harming the environment, it

- A) can only be used to run cars and power plants
- B) can't be considered as the best possible source of energy for our future needs
- C) is as harmful to the economy as natural gas
- D) cannot presently be produced without harm to the environment
- E) is too expensive to be in general use

75- The author emphasises that the advantage of the University of Warwick's method is that it

- A) is very cheap, though supplies may be scarce
- B) provides an alternative use for sewage
- C) is more profitable for the energy industry than for environmentalists
- D) solves the economic and transport problems of using natural gas
- E) is environmentally friendly and the material used is plentiful

- A) Leo and Anton should not depart any later than the 27th.
- B) Leo and Anton could have left as early as the 27th.
- C) It is not possible for Leo and Anton to depart before the 27th.
- D) Leo and Anton must have left after the 27th.
- E) Leo and Anton will try to get away on the 27th if that is not too soon.

77- He is completely illiterate, yet he has amassed a fortune.

- A) If only he were not illiterate, he might have become rich.
- B) Despite his inability to read and write, he has become extremely wealthy.
- C) His illiteracy does not seem to have been any bar to him in his business life.
- D) His lack of education has led to his not doing very well in life.
- E) He lost his fortune because he could not read or write.

78- Oliver wouldn't believe in anything if he didn't see it with his own eyes.

- A) Oliver only believes in something when he has actually seen it.
- B) If Oliver can see this with his own eyes, then perhaps he will believe it.
- C) Oliver only believes it because he has actually seen it.
- D) Oliver has never seen this; therefore, he does not believe it.
- E) You may need to show it to Oliver if you want him to believe in something.

79- Taxi fares have just increased by twenty-five percent, so I will probably be walking more.

- A) If only the taxi fares hadn't gone up so much, I wouldn't have to walk everywhere now.
- B) I am walking a lot more now because of the twenty-five percent increase in taxi fares.
- C) Due to the recent twenty-five percent jump in taxi prices, I will most likely hire a taxi less and walk more.
- D) If the taxi fares hadn't gone up by twenty-five percent, I wouldn't be getting so much healthy exercise.
- E) Now that taxi fares have recently increased by twenty-five percent, I can no longer travel by taxi.

81- Could anything be more simple, more satisfyingly logical than the keyboard of the piano? Each octave is divided into 12 steps, all the steps are equal, so you can start on any one and play the same tune. This symmetry is based on the most elementary maths: each octave exactly doubles the vibrations per second of the octave below, with the intervening space divided up into tones and semi-tones.? Well, no. That this seemingly unsophisticated invention exists at all is thanks to the combined efforts of Pythagoras, Euclid, Newton and Galileo plus a host of fellow-thinkers over a span of more than 2000 years.

- A) Why had no one thought of it sooner
- B) Surely even someone with an ordinary mind could have devised that, couldn't he
- C) Can anyone learn to play this instrument on their own
- D) Isn't the piano similar to the harpsichord
- E) Isn't it all incredibly complicated to compose concertos on the piano

82- The first man to go into space was Russia's Yuri Gagarin. On Apr. 12, 1961, Gagarin made a single orbit of the Earth on Vostok 1 inclined at 65° to the Equator and ranging between 109 and 188 miles altitude. The spacecraft comprised a ball-like re-entry capsule, containing Gagarin on an ejection seat, and a service module with retro-rocket, air supply and gas-jet stabilisation. The entire flight from lift-off to touch-down lasted 108 minutes. But five other cosmonauts later flew in Vostok spacecraft, including the first space woman Valentina Tereshkova.

- A) Gagarin never went into space on this spacecraft again
- B) During the Cold War, there was a great deal of competition between the Soviet Union and the United States
- C) With their first unmanned satellites, the Soviet Union preferred polar orbits
- D) Vostok 2 succeeded to make 17 orbits around the Earth
- E) In spite of this, the United States was the first country to put a man on the moon

83- The first thing you noticed was the face, a dead-white mask of misery with black holes for eyes, a curt slash of red for a mouth and cheekbones as high as the sky. But she also made dances to go with it — harsh, angular fantasies spun out of the strange proportions of her short-legged body and the pain and loneliness of her secret heart. If Graham ever gave birth, one critic commented, it would be to a cube; instead, she became the mother of American dance.

- A) As a character in a novel, she was unforgettable
- B) Graham announced her retirement in 1970, but she continued to create new dances until her death in New York City
- C) She created the most demanding body-training methods in the field of modern dancing
- D) Even if Martha Graham had done nothing else worth mentioning in her 96 years, she might be remembered for that face
- E) In a career spanning 70 years, Graham created 180 dance works, some of which were based on Greek legends

84- Few of us realise how each individual is a kind of moving zoo of organisms. Most cells in the human body are not our own, and those that are are a product of long past coalitions. We are wholly dependent on bacteria to breathe and digest. All around us are other organisms of similar complexity linked to each other in an ever-changing system of mutual dependence. It is that precious envelope into which we are unwittingly punching holes with almost no idea of the result.

- A) So it is obvious that not all bacteria are harmful
- B) It truly is a very complicated system, and is so vast that even mankind is incapable of doing it any real harm
- C) Together these make up what could be called the "biospheric membrane", which covers the Earth
- D) Something similar has existed ever since life began on the Earth
- E) Botanists, biologists and naturalists have been studying this for centuries

85- Steven Spielberg's first films were made at a time when directors were the most important people in Hollywood, and his more recent ones at a time when marketing controls the industry. This fact says something for his appealing to the general public and his talent. No one else has put together a more popular body of work, yet within the entertainer, there is also an artist capable of The Colour Purple and Schindler's List. When entertainer and artist came fully together, the result was E.T., a remarkable fusion of mass appeal and stylistic mastery.

- A) This is the most probable reason that his popularity has waned in recent years
- B) Schindler's List was adapted from Thomas Keneally's novel, Schindler's Ark
- C) Just look at the films he has produced but did not direct
- D) Of course not everyone likes his films
- E) Yet he has remained the most powerful filmmaker in the world during both periods

86- A friend invites you to see a Tarantino film at a film festival. You dislike violent films, and Tarantino in particular. Not wanting to sit through such a film, you reply apologetically:

- A) Is it true that Tarantino's films are particularly violent?
- B) I'm afraid I'm not a great fan of Tarantino. Maybe some other time for another film.
- C) I don't know how you can sit through such rubbish.
- D) Good idea. I haven't seen a Tarantino film for a long time.
- E) I don't know much about Tarantino. What kind of films does he direct?

87- Your brother is depressed because he lost his job as an accountant through no fault of his own. He has had one or two interviews since, but there are always dozens of applicants for each job. Trying to encourage him, you say:

- A) If only you had worked harder, you wouldn't have lost your job in the first place.
- B) Now you know what life is like for people who have to struggle just to get by.
- C) If you had any money for capital, you could start your own business.
- D) Something is bound to turn up for a good accountant like you if you just keep trying.
- E) I don't know why you want to be an accountant anyway. I can't imagine anything more boring.

88- You have a pen-pal in England. After carefully saving your money, you have decided to spend several months in England studying English. You have your visa and have arranged the language school and accommodation. You would like to meet your pen-pal in person while you are there, so you write:

- A) Can you send me a photograph so I can decide if I really want to meet you or not?
- B) Can you be my guarantor for my visa?
- C) Since I can't afford a place to stay at, can you put me up while I'm in England?
- D) Can you recommend a good language school?
- E) As long as I will be in England, maybe we could get together.

89- You have been participating in the school drama club for some time. You are now doing a play that requires someone to play the villain, but you have no suitable actor. A friend of yours enjoys pretending to be bad, and you think he might be ideal for the part in spite of his lack of acting experience, so you approach him and say:

- A) I think you could act evil enough to be the bad guy in our play, couldn't you?
- B) Don't you think I would be a good villain?
- C) It's a shame you don't know how to act, for there might be a good part for you.
- D) You're not really a bad guy. I don't know why you like to act so.
- E) If I were you, I would stop trying to pretend I was so tough.

90- You are the referee in a friendly football match. You try to be completely impartial when you have to call a penalty on a close friend. He is quite angry at you, but you are sure you have made the right decision, so after the match you say to him:

- A) You must be blind if you think that was a penalty.
- B) You know I couldn't show any favouritism just because we're friends.
- C) I really wish I hadn't called that penalty on you by mistake.
- D) I don't know why you are upset just because you lost the match.
- E) You're lucky you didn't get sent off after such a stupid and evident foul.

91- Jill: Are you still working at the bank?

Marlene: No, I got bored with it, so I started my own business selling sportswear.

Jill:

Marlene: Yes, but it is much more challenging.

- A) Isn't that less reliable than having a regular salary?
- B) Have you ever run your own business before?
- C) Have you got anything I might be interested in?
- D) Oh, that sounds much more satisfying than sitting at a desk.
- E) Is your husband helping you out?

92- David: What does your father do for a living?

Trevor:

David: He must have been quite old when he had you, then.

Trevor: That's true. He married late, and I'm the last of eight children.

- A) He is some sort of an investment banker.

PASSAGES

1. FROM VILLAGE TO CITY

Fixed human settlement in small villages began about 10,000 years ago. The evolution of the village into the city took about 1,500 years — from 5000 to 3500 BC. The larger settlements were made possible through technological improvements in agriculture, including irrigation, the domestication of animals and the invention of the wheel, which made possible a great improvement in transportation. One of the most significant factors that enabled cities to grow and prosper was the division of labour. The greater the size of the population, the greater were its needs. Not everyone could be a farmer. Someone had to build the homes, granaries, temples, government structures and armament storage facilities. Craftsmen were needed to provide the tools and luxuries for everyday living. Forms of exchange developed, including the invention of money. This, in turn, required systems of recording and, therefore, the invention of writing and numbers. The rise of even more complex administrative, security, religious and economic functions led to more complex social organisation. This resulted in a division of society into upper and lower classes, with kings, warriors and priests at the top and peasants and craftsmen below.

2. THE SENSORY RECEPTORS of ANIMALS

Animals, like humans, use their ability to see, hear, smell, taste and touch to respond to the world around them. But a good many animals also have special sensory receptors that help them as they move about and search for food. Some birds use the sun and stars to navigate. But when the sun or stars are not visible, birds must rely on other senses. The barnacle geese, for example, can detect the magnetic forces that surround the Earth. This special sense helps them know where they are in relation to the Earth's poles. Dolphins use a similar ability to detect the magnetic landmarks around them as they swim and search for food in murky waters. Locust use their eyes and antennae to navigate and to regulate their flying speed. By looking at the ground, they can determine how fast they are going. And if their antennae bend too much in the wind, they will slow down. A group of mackerel are able to swim together, even in the dark, without bumping into each other. They can do this because of a lateral-line organ that runs the length of its body. This organ detects movement in the water, such as ripples made by other fish, and helps the mackerel navigate and avoid its enemies. The thornback ray, like many other fish, has the ability to sense the small amounts of electricity given off by nerve impulses or muscle contractions. Pores around the ray's mouth pick up these electrical discharges and help the ray as it hunts for food. Some snakes, like the North American cottonmouth, have a special pit organ underneath their eyes that senses the heat given off by animals. The organ helps the snake find its prey, even in the dark of night. These are but a few examples of animals with special senses. These senses help them detect a wide variety of stimuli in the world around them as they move about and search for food.

3. PELE, THE LEGEND in SOCCER

"Soccer in its purest form" was played by Pele, a South American superstar who was the world's most famous and highest-paid athlete when he joined a North American team in 1975. He led the Brazilian national soccer team to three World Cup victories in 1958, 1962 and 1970 and to permanent possession of the Jules Rimet Trophy.

Edson Arantes do Nascimento was born to a poor family on October 23, 1940, in Tres Coracoes, Brazil. He began playing for a local minor-league club when he was a teenager. He made his debut with the Santos Football Club in 1956. With Pele at inside left forward, the team won several South American clubs' cups and the 1962 world club championship, in addition to the three World Cup championships.

Pele scored his 1,000th goal in 1969. The legendary athlete retired in 1974 but made a comeback in 1975, reportedly, after accepting a 7-million-dollar contract for three years with the New York Cosmos of the North American Soccer League. He said he came out of retirement, not for the money, but to "make soccer truly popular in the United States." His farewell appearance was against his old Santos club in 1977.

Pele, whose nickname does not mean anything, became a Brazilian national hero and was also known as Perola Negra, meaning Black Pearl. An average-sized man, he was blessed with speed, great balance, tremendous vision, the ability to control the ball superbly and the ability to shoot powerfully and accurately with either foot and with his head. In his career he played in 1,363 matches and scored 1,281 goals. His best season was 1958, when he scored 139 times. In addition to his accomplishments in sports, he published several best-selling autobiographies, starred in several documentary and semi-documentary films, and composed numerous musical pieces, including the entire sound track for the film 'Pele', in 1977. He was the 1978 recipient of the International Peace Award, and in 1980, he was named athlete of the century.

4. A BRIEF HISTORY of SPECIAL EDUCATION

Modern special education got its start in Spain during the 16th century with classes for the deaf. Pedro Ponce de Leon was able to teach deaf students to speak, read and write. A successor of Leon, Juan Pablo Bonet, adopted the same methods and published a book on the subject in 1620. The success of teaching the deaf in Spain soon aroused interest in the problem throughout Europe. In France, in the 18th century, Charles-Michel developed a sign language for the deaf for use both as a means of teaching and for ordinary conversation. Attempts to educate the blind were not undertaken until the end of the 18th century. The first outstanding teacher was Valentin Haüy of France, who has been called the "father and apostle of the blind." He opened an institute for blind children in Paris in 1784. Following his success, similar schools were established over the next 25 years in Liverpool, Vienna, London, Berlin, Amsterdam and Zurich. Schools for the blind were founded in Boston, Mass., and New York City in 1832. Attempts to teach the mentally retarded also started in France, but not until the early 19th century. The first significant efforts were made by a physician named Jean-Marc-Gaspard Itard, who had devoted much time and money to teaching deaf-mutes. His now-classic book, The Wild Boy of Aveyron, tells how he succeeded in educating an uncivilised 11-year-old boy who had been found living in a forest. Itard's work was taken up by Edouard Seguin, a French psychiatrist. He opened a school for the mentally retarded in 1839 that became internationally known. In 1848 he immigrated to the United States. There he founded the Seguin Psychological School in Orange, N.J. His work, in turn, influenced Maria Montessori, one of the most widely acclaimed innovators in modern schooling.

5. WILLIAM H. TAFT

The only man in the nation to hold its two highest offices was William Howard Taft. He was the 27th president of the United States and later, between 1921-30, the chief justice of the United States Supreme Court. No man was better fitted for these posts by long years of experience. He had been in public office almost continuously since 1881. He was the first civil governor of the Philippines and secretary of war in President Theodore Roosevelt's Cabinet, only two of the many high positions he held. His large size and his famous chuckle made Taft a memorable figure. He was 5 feet 11 inches tall, with fair complexion, clear blue eyes and light hair. At the time he was president, he weighed 350 pounds. He joked about his bulk and took no offense at the jokes of others. Asked to accept a "chair of law" at Yale University, he replied that he would if they could make it a "sofa of law". Chairs were a problem. He always "looked before he sat" to avoid armchairs or antiques in which he might get stuck or collapse. When he was governor of the Philippines, Taft made a trip into the mountains for the benefit of his health. He cabled Secretary of War Elihu Root: "Stood trip well. Rode horseback 25 miles to 5,000 feet elevation." Root cabled back: "Referring to your telegram . . . how is the horse?" His biographer, Henry F. Pringle, has described the Taft chuckle: "It was by all odds the most infectious chuckle in the history of politics. It started with a silent trembling of Taft's ample stomach. The next sign was a pause in the reading of his speech, and the spread of a slow grin across his face. Then came a kind of gulp which seemed to escape without his being aware that the climax was near. Laughter followed hard on the chuckle itself, and the audience invariably joined in."
